Thinking Out Loud

(By H. M. L.)

The other day your commentator listened attentively to a dessertation by a peace officer on "guts." This is a word that has come to be a commonplace synonym for courage or pluck. When he had finished, his attention was drawn to the fact that every war has demonstrated the fact that "guts" is a common human attribute, of which no nation possesses a monopoly. Probably a million American boys and young men were under fire in the World war and very few indeed displayed an absence of "guts."

Recruiting officers in every war reject a very large percentage of the volunteers, or the drafted, because they have so little in their upper story that their enrollment becomes a liability instead of an asset. Physical defects also play a large part in rejections, but no one ever heard of a man being rejected because, in the medical scrutiny of his person or in the mental examination given him, there was observed a yellow streak.

As a matter of fact, it may be easily surmised that much of the carnage of war could be avoided if soldiers and officers, particularly the latter, were more intelligent. We often speak of making the head save the feet. Soldiers could probably make their heads save their skins more often than is done, if their mental capacity were higher. We are not advocating drafting Phi Beta Kappas only when the next war comes, but we do believe that fewer and smarter soldiers would accomplish more than greater numbers of dull ones.

And speaking of pluck (really a better word, for courage has nothing to do with intestines unless we wish to attribute valor to a tape worm) not only war demonstrates that courage is one of the most outstanding of human attributes, but that the depression, which invariably follows war, also demonstrates how almost universal is this great quality. Indeed, it is one of the sharp demarkations between human kind and all the rest of creation.

Call to mind, if you will, readers of this column, all the examples of pluck, which standing on your front door step you can name in your neighborhood. Do you know for instance, a young girl, splendid stenographer and office manager, who was thrown out of her good job by the depression, who accepted lesser work at a tiny salary in order to keep her invalid father in medical supplies, with a roof over his head and food for his emaciated body. Not only that but she is making her patient young man wait until times are better before she marries him. Soldiers and peace officers really inherit their pluck from women of this kind.

Then there is the elderly couple who were quite wealthy before the depression. The Juggernaut rolled over them and left them very flat. Did they spend time repining when their life time fortune that they had labored for, was gone. No they both took whatever work their hands could find to do, turned and returned the clothing they had worn in better years, skimped on the food supply and paid their bills. There's a couple that can look any man in the eye and tell him where to go.

Then there was the young couple that were going to be married and along came this hurricane of adversity and blew away all their little savings and plans. Well, they up and married anyhow and in doing so displayed the same courage as that admiral who said: "Damn the torpedoes. Go head!" Of course they had a mighty hard time of it, but no harder probably than they would have had if they had gone on in single blessedness. Both had to work at whatever there was to do and take whatever was offered in the way of pay, but they are managing. They have gone to the school of adversity and are now, save for a short post graduate course, almost ready for a real place in the world.

We could fill this column with the record of actual persons and their names, well known to us, who have displayed the highest courage throughout their lifetime. Of course the above instances are completely disguised. No true hero loves the mead of praise his courage merits.

The fact is that courage is so necessary in the upward surge of the individual, of nations and of civilization itself, that lacking it, life ceases to be of any value whatever.

SPRING URGE AFFECTS HENRY HUCKINS' DEER

The pet deer of Henry Huckins of the Willow Springs Service Station in the suburbs of San Juan got out of his corral Sunday—and did he go berserk!

That deer was tired of his eight years captivity, and on this spring Sunday morning, nostalgia for the freedom of the hills urged him to make a break for freedom.

The whole town turned out to assist in the re-capture—but the old buck butted right and left and five or six of the Ridge inhabitants were felled. Finally Henry Huckins succeeded in roping him and with much shoving and hauling he was restored to his corral.

This deer is the one of "Believe it or Not" fame who produced the seven sets of horns that adorn the walls of the store.

BYRD CACHETS COME TO NEV. CITY COLLECTOR

Cachets have become quite a fad. These envelopes with the penguins, dates and Little America, stamped on them are highly prized.

RATE BASIS FOR UTILITY TAX IS GIVEN APPROVAL

SACRAMENTO, April 1.—Without a dissenting vote the assembly today passed AB 1775, by Assemblyman Jesse M. Mayo of Calaveras County, which would require that the state board of equalization assess the properties of the privately owned public utilities on the basis of their valuations established by the railroad commission in fixing rates.

The vote was 73 to 0.

Mayo explained his measure would insure the fair taxation of the holdings of the utilities and home owners alike.

He said he also believes it would prevent the watering of utilities securities in order to secure high rates, as the corporations would be penalized by higher tax payments.

The measure went to the senate.

Chamber to Discuss Calling Conference on Bear River Suit

Fred F. Cassidy announced this morning that there would be a meeting of the Nevada City Chamber of Commerce, of which he is president, tomorrow (Tuesday) evening at which the question of proposing conference between officials of the Pacific Gas & Electric Company, and those of the several placer mining companies along the Bear river against whom the P. G. & E. has brought an injunction suit, will be discussed.

In open letter yesterday Judge George L. Jones drew attention to the importance of calling a conference of the litigants in this suit and of making an earnest effort to setle the issues out of court. His letter follows:

The article of Frank G. Crampton relative to the controversy between the Pacific Gas and Electric Company and certain mine operators on the Greenhorn, Steephollow and Bear river watersheds published recently, cannot but impress one with the seriousness of the situation not only as it applies to the operators made defendants, but also to the district in general. These articles must also convince the impartial reader of the advisability of an early settlement of the litigation out of court, if possible, for a continuance of court proceedings will mean uncertainty and delay which will in all probability prove disastrous to many interests.

As a civic body, designed to lead in matters affecting the welfare of our city and the mining industry of this section, the Chamber of Commerce of Nevada City has been urged to call a conference of the parties of this litigation, so that any plans which might produce a settlement without delay of the problem at issue may be discussed and, if one is found feasible, immediate steps to bring about its adoption might follow.

I cannot see that anything can be lost by such a conference; but, on the other hand, much may be gained, and the hope is therefore expressed that our Chamber of Commerce will assume the lead in calling and arranging for a meeting of those involved in the action.

GEORGE L. JONES.

Political Outlook

(Contributed)

According to all signs, the Presidential campaign of 1936 is likely to make that of 1932—which was considered exceptionally bitter—look like a tea party. Issues are forming, the forces are appearing, that are entirely unprecedented in American politics.

It seems inevitable that there will be a third party in the field—and it seems equally inevitable that that party will be of the extreme left. It may be led by Huey Long, backed by Father Coughlin, and use as its appeal the "Every man a king" thesis. It may be led by a Townsend Plan advocate, promising prosperity for all through governmental largesse to the aged. It may be led by someone who stands for something we haven't yet heard of.

Few think that the third party candidate would win—the Electoral College system of counting votes for the Presidency makes that practically impossible, as Roosevelt the first discovered, and as La Follette the elder did after him. The third party's importance lies in what effect it will have on the vote obtained by the regular Republican and Democratic party candidates—and therein is an opportunity for endless conjecture.

Backers of the President pooh-pooh the third party, say he is certain to win a sweeping victory in '36 whether the movement materializes or not. Opponents of the President hold that the third party would draw millions of votes that would otherwise go to Mr. Roosevelt, would thus indirectly cause the election of a conservative Republican, who would have support of most business men, together with the party's established following.

It was that aspect of the question which General Johnson spoke on in his amazing speech of a fortnight ago. Whatever you think of the General's views, you have to admit he has courage, he isn't afraid to speak his mind. In his speech, he made a bitter attack on Long and Coughlin and all they stood for. Then he turned and lashed the conservatives who might encourage them in order to draw support away from Roosevelt and split the liberal-radical camp. General Johnson said that such political opportunism pushes the American democracy steadily toward "a licking or a dictator." It is an interesting fact that, following the speech, the General's views were heartily endorsed in many substantial quarters — including newspapers, public men and industrialists.

A question of the hour is, How does Mr. Roosevelt's strength compare to what it was a year ago? The answer, made by boiling down the opinion of a legion of observers, is that he is slipping—but that he still has the confidence of the bulk of the voters. That, of course, doesn't answer the question of how far he may slip—or have regained or added strength—by next year. That, in turn, is going to depend on the state of recovery.

At the present time, the recovery program has failed in various important particulars—and, in addition, it has become confused with the reform program. Unemployment soars. More people are on relief than ever. Industry is sitting still, and many leaders seem pessimistic. A belief is prevalent that the President's program has lost direction—that it is whirling around in circles, is going nowhere.

It is that fact which supports the hopes of third party radicals—they feel that the people, if they see the failure of a more moderate program, will go for one that is really left-wing. And the conservatives, strangely enough, base their hopes on exactly the same thing—they believe that a Roosevelt collapse would send voters scurrying back to the right-wing of economic thought.

What is right? Guess as much as you like—but don't bet on it.

WEEKLY COMMENT

BY

Christian Andersen

What I am about to say s not to be construed as a swan song, a defense of, nor a brief for, any railroad in the world. There is however, a lot of romance about the railroad business, and it is said that "once a railroad man, always a railroad man." At the station in any town there is always a sort of a bustle and all about somebody else's business.

The mail comes in, the newspapers come via the railroad, bodies are shipped and received for burial, couples spoon on the station platform, brides and grooms receive their last salvo of rice at the depot, tramps watch for their chance to ride out of town in the style to which they are most accustomed, railroad bulls watch all the activities of all humanity who must come to this common meeting place of all humanity, and so it goes day after day. Anyway a fellow should say a good word for his Alma Mater.

Today in one of the town's tonsorial establishments the discovery was made that there were three Christians in the place. Not real Christians understand, the tonsorial artist's name is Christian, mine is Christian, another customer's name is Christian. They are neither Swedes or Norwegians. Three guesses. You are right, they were Danes. I said WERE.

Even Alleghany has gone "arty". There is a functioning Players Guild there. According to the plans their first show will be given on May 11. J. H. Morris, Jr., is in charge of publicity. This kind of community effort deserves financial and moral support.

San Francisco recently considered adding to the general taxes a sufficient amount to assure a continuation of their symphony orchestra and other outstanding musical organizations.

Your Nevada City correspondent advocated this sort of arrangement a year ago in this column. When we finally awaken to the cultural value of music and other arts, no doubt, other communities will follow suit and thus assure themselves and neighbors of the advantage of good music.

If in all communities there could be a revaluation of all property each year or two we would find much more really legitimate money flowing into county, city and state treasuries.

Spring seems to have arrived and with a hop, skip and jump I was drafted into the kite flying episode. Can you see a fifty year oldster flying a kite, nevertheless that is what happened. If truth is a virtue I am willing to admit that I enjoyed it as much as the kids.

'CHU CHIN CHOW' AND 'THE GILDED LILY' PLAY AT THE NEVADA THEATRE

Only a Bagdad of dreams could be so splendid, so glittering, so absorbingly alluring, mysterious, and intriguing to the eyes and ears as the Bagdad of "Chu Chin Chow," the superb Gaumont-British film, which will cast its Oriental spell over a delighted audience at the Nevada Theatre tonight and Tuesday.

For here at last the Orient one only knew heretofore in fables, the exotic Orient of romance the East of echoing silver bells, of mosques, minarets and the Muezzin, introducing treasure into his own coffers from the store of Ali's miserly brother.

There is the discovery of the Robber's Cave, with its massed treasure of fabulous value, by Ali; the "Open Sesame" adjuration which enables him to enter and enrich himself; his brother's death at the robbers' hands, when detected on a similar mission; Zahrat's subtle intriguing by which the master outlaw's schemes are brought to naught, and he himself perishes miserably by the cold steel.

A gay, sprightly, and light-spirited new comedy, "The Gilded Lily," comes Wednesday and Thursday to the Nevada Theatre, with beautiful Claudette Colbert in the starring role and two handsome leading men supporting her.

A bright and intelligent film-full of warm, human comedy touches, it presents Miss Colbert in her first singing and dancing role since "The Torch Singer." The plot of the "Gilded Lily" concerns a pair of amiable people whose principal diversion is sitting on a park bench and munching popcorn. But their blissful heaven is broken up when Claudette Colbert falls in love with an English noble visiting here incognito.
